

I understand that the FCC is considering nullification of New Jersey's do not call law because it is more stringent than the Federal Statute. Such action would be a grave mistake. Except for an occasional non profit solicitation, and political appeal, we have had blessed peace in our home since the New Jersey law went into effect. We must endure endless commercials on TV and now at the movies, tons of junk mail, glossy advertising inserts in our news papers, billboards on buildings and highways, product placements in films and tv shows...isn't that enough opportunity for businesses to reach us? Rather than lowering the bar in New Jersey, perhaps raising the Federal standard would be more appropriate.
